GRACENOTES

Moon Shadows

The past mornings I was on the porch early enough to enjoy the moon shadows. The trees and fence posts and chairs cast shadows from the light of the moon. On the first of these mornings, I became hungry and headed to breakfast. As I stood I thought, "How often does one get to watch moon shadows disappear?" I grabbed another cup of coffee and came right back.

I consciously watched the moon shadows fade as it dawned on me.

It had never occurred to me that this is the moment that night becomes day. I witnessed the changing from the "lesser light to guide the night" to the "greater light to guide the day" (Genesis 1). God testifies to His presence continually. He established order for the matter He made. His word is wonderful, but His presence leaves us in awe. How can anyone, with the brain they possess, believe creation is accidentally coincidental? Simply watching the moon shadows fade proves the existence of an awesome Creator. He warms with the sun and impacts with the moon. The moon did not go anywhere as the shadows faded. The light of the sun simply over-shaded the moon shadows.

It dawned on me quite literally. I met God again that morning. I learned something. Day begins when the moon shadows fade. I am left to consider. God longs to dawn on me. "Awake, sleeper, And arise from the dead, And Christ will shine on you." Ephesians 5:14

It just dawned on me!
